It appears that the State has already decided upon what they plan to do and that none of the comments by people affected by the rate increases are even being taken into account. Elephant Butte State Park has already told the volunteers at the Visitor Center to start telling visitors what the increase is going to be BEFORE the meetings are even scheduled to be held. What a waste of people's time! They might as well start familiarizing themselves with their options for free dump sites, free dispersed camping, and solar options. Good luck, State of New Mexico!
